WHAT I'M WATCHING: The Principles of Pleasure

People of all ages, genders and orientations want to know about female pleasure. The most common questions people ask me are related to female orgasms. While there are ample resources to find accurate and helpful guidance, few people access the information they need. The new Netflix docuseries, The Principles of Pleasure covers extensive details people need and want about pleasure zones, the clitoris, orgasms, the brain and much more. As I rewatch, I am taking mad notes on new research and old concepts clarified by scientists, researchers, doctors and sexuality educators. This brilliant and informative docuseries combines expert perspectives with stories from women who have had a wide variety of experiences of learning (and not learning!) about their bodies and sexuality.

WELL, NOW! CAMP June 9-12, 2022

In 2019, I was asked to do a comedy show for women at Well, Now! Camp. After a two-year hiatus due to the Pandemic, Well, Now! Camp is returning June 9-12, 2022. When I am not performing my show, I participate in the camp activities and unhook from my life as a working adult with multiple realms of responsibilities. For decades, I dreamed of going to camp as an adult. Well, Now! Camp fulfills all my dreams with writing, art and theater workshops as well as book discussions, a dance party and a treasure hunt across the Kenyon College campus. There are walks, hikes, runs and yoga opportunities every day. All of the meals are plant-based and delicious: most of the recipes are from Jane and Anne Esselstyn's cookbooks and YouTube cooking show (113,000 followers and growing by the way).

Whether you are plant-based, plant-curious or just aiming for more plants in your life, you will love the food. I met so many great women and had such a joyful, healthy time.
